Report 2

Today I successfully managed to get a working rocket that actually took off!! I was actually investigating whether it went off because I thought the fuse died but no it went off and it worked. It's fun because it didn't have good control but it worked!!!

Why?

We finally learned how to get a fuse that worked and had the fuselage working in such a way it was a light class rocket meaning that I would actually take off. This is a massive success and it means that the future might actually be possible to continue this when I was starting to lose hope.

how

By setting it up and actually getting a good piston off and we actually got a good amount of time where the rocket was up.

conclusion

The next steps would be to run this one more time and probably get a video of it which I will be doing soon.
